

People with Disabilities Do Not Want Segregated Employment: Give Us a Chance!

Cindy Bentley of Milwaukee has lived a life of segregation. She grew up in a state institution and later worked in a sheltered workshop. The victim of low expectations, she fought her way to be a community contributor.

Now living in her own apartment (with her two cats) and working as an Executive Director of a non-profit, she is famous for saying, "I love to pay taxes."

- A new federal rule will increase integrated employment opportunities for people with disabilities and help Wisconsin's Medicaid budget. It WILL NOT shut down sheltered workshops!
- When people with disabilities, even those with significant intellectual disabilities work in the community they earn more and reduce their need for public supports.
- Did you know the cost per hour worked is $10.45 in integrated employment vs. $15.91 in facility-based employment?
- People with disabilities support the federal rule to open up more jobs in our communities and use Medicaid $ more efficiently!
